BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF SUBJECT

This course is designed to be a comprehensive introduction to the social, cultural, political, economic and foreign relations history of the United States. We will be examining a variety of outstanding speeches, essays, articles and relevant historical films. Through the study of the major features of American history that have shaped the nation, students will be analyzing the many ways Americans have defined themselves.

OBJECTIVES

The purpose of the course is

- to acquaint students with a wide range of aspects of America and its history
- to analyse the role and the influence of the most outstanding personalities
- to familiarize the student with the major speeches and documents in American history
- to encourage them to consider not just the events themselves but the way they have been narrated and the role of history in the formation of a common culture.

PROCEDURE

The course will be based on lectures that will combine textual, graphic, audiovisual resources. Students are expected to read the texts well in advance so that they contribute to the in-class debate. The last 20-25 minutes of each class will be devoted to the discussion and analysis of the assigned texts.

All papers should be handed in according to academic standards and using the MLA or Chicago Manual of Style. No papers will be accepted AFTER their deadline. Failure to submit them in time will result in a “No Presentat” for that particular paper. Students who plagiarize will automatically FAIL.

ASSESSMENT

Final exam: 50%

Midterm exam: 30%

Participation and tutorials (2): 20%
