

CORRECTION

Correction: Alternatives to sustainable development: what can we learn from the pluriverse in practice?

Shivani Kaul¹ · Bengi Akbulut² · Federico Demaria^{3,4,5}  · Julien-François Gerber⁶

Published online: 3 September 2022

© The Author(s), under exclusive licence to Springer Japan KK, part of Springer Nature 2022

Correction: Sustainability Science (2022) 17:1149–1158
<https://doi.org/10.1007/s11625-022-01210-2>

Publisher's Note Springer Nature remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

In the original publication of this editorial article, under the “Introduction” section, one of the articles was not mentioned. It is mentioned in this correction and the complete sentence should read as below.

The “pluriversal” concepts range from community economies, agroecology, solidarity economies, alternative currencies, ecovillages, democratic economy, “science of women and life” (Jineoloji), Zapatista autonomy and sumak kawsay. The contributions present a range of geographical and historical case studies, and span transnational networks, self-help groups in Andhra Pradesh and West Bengal, agro-ecological peasant networks in Haiti and Tanzania and drug users in Tehran, ecovillages in the Yucatan of Mexico, grassroots innovation for the pluriverse in Chiapas, municipal indigenous politics in Cayambe Ecuador, solidarity economy networks in Massachusetts, Kurdish women’s movement in Rojava, black rural cooperatives in the southern US, cryptocurrencies in Berlin, and community credit in Chiloe, Chile.

The original article can be found online at <https://doi.org/10.1007/s11625-022-01210-2>.

✉ Federico Demaria
federicodemaria@gmail.com

¹ University of Amsterdam, Amsterdam, The Netherlands

² Concordia University, Montréal, Canada

³ Department of Economic History and Institutions, University of Barcelona, Barcelona, Spain

⁴ Institute of Environmental Science and Technology, Autonomous University of Barcelona, Bellaterra, Spain

⁵ Humanities Centre for Advanced Studies “Futures of Sustainability: Modernization, Transformation, Control”, University of Hamburg, Hamburg, Germany

⁶ International Institute of Social Studies, Erasmus University Rotterdam, The Hague, The Netherlands