WE ARE A TOTAL BEVERAGE COMPANY

In 2017, The Coca-Cola Company continued to reshape our business for more robust and sustainable growth with strategic decisions to expand our consumer-centric brand portfolio, enhance our franchise bottling system, deliver new efficiencies and create more long-term value for our shareowners and everyone connected to our business. This year's Annual Review offers a snapshot of our ongoing journey to improve our operations, build our brands and refresh the world as a total beverage company.

OUR INCLUSIVE APPROACH TO LONG-TERM VALUE CREATION

Our story began on May 8, 1886, when the very first Coca-Cola® was sold in Atlanta, Georgia. From these humble roots, our business has grown to touch the lives of people in cities, towns and villages across more than 200 nations.

Coca-Cola has a long history of refreshing the world. Along the way, we've written another closely related story, one of growing long-term sustainable value for shareowners like you and everyone connected to our business.

In 2017, we added an exciting chapter in this story. President and CEO James Quincey shares more about our operational strategies and successes in his letter.

For my part, I'd like to discuss our commitment to long-term value creation and how we believe an inclusive approach helps optimize shareowner value creation over time.

Legendary Coca-Cola Chairman Robert Woodruff liked to describe how every person connected to our business had to be paid from the same dollar.

So our inclusive view of value creation is not new. But it has never been more important, as people increasingly choose our brands not only for the refreshment in each bottle but also for the shared value we create for:

- Our shareowners
- Our customers
- Our consumers
- Our suppliers and other business partners
- Our people
- Our non-profit partners and public agencies
- Our bottling partners
- Our communities and governments

Our shareowners. With each decision, we strive to do all we can to create near- and long-term value for shareowners like you. We look at our assets—including our people, our brand portfolio, our customer and partner relationships—and we make choices to maximize shareowner value.

For example, we are strengthening our brand and packaging mix to put the right drinks in the right packages in the right places to drive sales and revenue—and create incremental value for our shareowners, customers, bottling partners and other stakeholders.

Our consumers. We are constantly adjusting to changing consumer tastes by polishing our brands, enhancing our beverage portfolio and evolving our packaging. Two examples: the robust growth of smaller packages like our mini cans and the runaway success of Coca-Cola Zero Sugar. Consumer-focused innovation creates value for our consumers, customers, bottling partners and shareowners.

Our people. We need a strong, capable workforce of diverse individuals, all bringing their unique insights, experiences and know-how to work every day. As a company, we need to be welcoming and inclusive, we need to help our people learn and grow, and we need to compensate them in a way that rewards the work they do and allows us to retain them.

Our bottling partners. In recent years, we've reshaped and re-energized our bottling system to optimize value creation. In 2017, we completed the U.S. refranchising process and helped to create stronger bottlers in China and Japan. These and other changes were designed to drive enhanced long-term value for our bottling partners, shareowners, customers, communities and more.

Our customers. Our system helps stores, restaurants and other customers become more successful by making sure each outlet has an optimal mix of brands, packages, marketing support, and fountain and cooler equipment. Ultimately, we want the customer value creation of our beverages to outpace our customers' other products or menu items, thus creating new value for our customers and opening up new opportunities to grow with them in the future.

Our suppliers and other business partners. Our business relies heavily on the power of partnerships with our suppliers, marketing agencies and many others. As we grow, we create more value for our partners, from fruit farmers, coffee growers and orchard owners to ad agencies, packaging suppliers and billboard companies. As Mr. Woodruff described, all of these people are paid from the same dollar.

Our non-profit partners and public agencies. We work with many partners outside the business world, from the International Olympic Committee, FIFA and the Special Olympics to government agencies to organizations like World Wildlife Fund, Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation and many others. The work we do together brings new shine to our brands as we celebrate the spirit of sport, make our world more inclusive and take steps to improve the environment, protect water resources, advance community health initiatives and create new economic opportunities.

Our communities and governments. We can't have a strong, growing business unless we are serving strong, growing communities. Much of the public good we do is fueled by the economic value we create for our customers, helping them employ more people, provide more for their families and contribute more to their communities. And we contribute to the public good in every community by paying local and national taxes.

We also look for fresh ways to create community value by, for example, improving access to educational opportunities, critical medicines and clean drinking water in underserved communities. In addition, we are committed to enabling the economic empowerment of 5 million women entrepreneurs with training, mentoring and micro credits. At year-end, we had reached 2.4 million women, and we are on track to meet our 2020 goal.

On behalf of the board of directors, thank you for your investment in The Coca-Cola Company. Along with James Quincey, his leadership team and all our associates, we remain committed to doing all we can to build long-term value creation for you and all those connected to our business.

Very best regards,

Muhtar Kent
Chairman of the Board of Directors

WE ARE GROWING OUR BUSINESS

We are fortunate to participate in an industry that is diversified across brands, categories, channels and countries; a thriving industry with strong relative growth within the consumer packaged goods space; and an industry in which our Company is uniquely positioned for disciplined growth in 2018 and beyond.

As the world's leading nonalcoholic beverage company, we have the world's most valuable brand portfolio, leading value share positions across multiple categories and, thanks to our nearly 250 bottling partners around the world, unparalleled distribution capabilities. And yet, after nearly 132 years of nurturing this business, we still have ample room to grow.

Early last year, I introduced five strategic priorities to drive accelerated growth for our Company and value for our shareowners. I'm happy to report on our progress. In 2017, we achieved or exceeded our full-year guidance, solidified our leadership position and recommitted to our long-term growth targets. What follows is a snapshot of how our priorities are fueling these results.

1 Accelerating the growth of our consumer-centric brand portfolio

The key to unlocking further growth is to start with the consumer, offering people a variety of beverages that make everyday moments more enjoyable. We refer to this as “Beverages for Life”—a vision that combines the brand-building expertise that has created 21 billion-dollar brands with a nimbler, test-and-learn approach to launching new products around the world. Last year, we expanded our consumer-centric brand portfolio by launching more than 500 products. We also rapidly scaled Honest Tea® and glacéau smartwater® into multiple international markets. And we launched Coca-Cola Zero Sugar™ in 20 markets, leading to double-digit revenue growth for the brand globally for the year.

We are balancing our focus on large brands while responding to emerging consumer trends, making targeted investments in juices, teas, coffees and other categories that complement people's diverse lifestyles. This includes beverages with organic and natural ingredients, with reduced sugar or new sugar alternatives, and with more vitamins, minerals and protein.

2 Driving revenue growth

We are continuously refining our revenue growth management practices to ensure we have the right price and package combinations in the marketplace to best meet consumer needs and desires. We are turning challenges into opportunities by, for example, introducing smaller package sizes that enable people to reduce calories while driving revenue growth and margin expansion. We are intensifying our focus on premium experiences with brands like Topo Chico or ViO Schorle, premium waters and spritzers with a disciplined approach to value over volume in the categories we participate in.

3 Strengthening our global system

Our bottling system continues to provide a competitive advantage through its global reach and local presence. Last year, we completed the refranchising of our bottling operations in the United States and China—key milestones in our strategy to strengthen our bottling system. We now have a better capitalized, more energized and highly focused bottling system. Returning the Company to a capital-light asset model means that we can reinvest in brand building and innovation while our bottling partners can focus on driving execution.

Our bottling partners are not only crucial to getting our brands to market, they are the local face of the Coca-Cola system and invaluable partners when it comes to investing in, and safeguarding, our reputation. Together with our bottlers, we are returning at least 100 percent of the water used in our finished beverages to communities and nature, enabling the economic empowerment of women entrepreneurs and taking responsibility for our packaging waste. In 2017, we developed our World Without Waste strategy, aiming to collect a bottle or can for each one we sell by 2030.

4 Digitizing our enterprise

Digital touches every part of our business, and we need to continuously adapt. We are doing so with a focus on consumers, customers and our internal systems. As our consumers continue to digitize their shopping habits, we are putting our beverages within a click's reach of desire. We are re-engineering our supply chain and using data to inform our decisions. And we are modernizing internal systems, empowering associates and allowing them to act with more speed and independence.

5 Unlocking the power of our people

We have made substantial changes to empower our associates. During the year, we introduced the role of Chief Growth Officer and appointed new management at the majority of our operations in the field. Change can sometimes be difficult, but it is necessary to drive the business forward. For example, we reduced our corporate office headcount to create a leaner, more agile organization and create more empowered, accountable business units in the field; and we changed our compensation model, introducing metrics that incentivize growth.

Perhaps most importantly, we are fostering a growth culture that encourages accountability, performance and ownership, where our associates are curious, inclusive, empowered and embrace a test-and-learn mentality. We must be curious about the outside world, about how the consumer is changing, about the customer strategy and how value is created. We must be inclusive, open to ideas and to learning, seeking new opportunities and ways to partner with our bottlers to grow our leadership position. Each of us needs to feel empowered and able to turn our insights into action. And we must act faster and experiment to capitalize on opportunities across the categories and countries that we need to succeed in.

We have a strong foundation

Our system and our more than 500 brands position us as the world's largest total beverage company. We reach 27 million customer outlets across more than 20 different channels through our global distribution network in more than 200 countries. We hold the number one value position in nonalcoholic ready-to-drink beverages, as well as in sparkling soft drinks; juice, dairy and plant-based beverages; water, enhanced water and sports drinks; and ready-to-drink tea and coffee. We are already in a strong position, and we are driving value growth across nearly all beverage category clusters.

We are excited to capitalize on the growth potential we see in front of us. We believe in the strength of our system, the continued growth of the beverage industry, and the actions that we are taking to win in 2018 and beyond.

Thank you for joining us as we continue to build upon our iconic brands and change the way people everywhere engage with The Coca-Cola Company.

Sincerely,

James Quincey
President and Chief Executive Officer

The Coca-Cola System Value Chain

How we do business is just as important as what we make. We strive to do the right thing for people and the planet. We aim to create shared opportunities in every community we serve. This graphic illustrates the major stages in our value chain, why they matter and how we are creating value at each stage.

Business Profile

The Coca-Cola Company is the world's largest beverage company. We own or license and market more than 500 nonalcoholic beverage brands, which we group into the following category clusters: sparkling soft drinks; water, enhanced water and sports drinks; juice, dairy and plant-based beverages; tea and coffee; and energy drinks.

We own and market four of the world's top five nonalcoholic sparkling soft drink brands: Coca-Cola, Diet Coke®, Fanta® and Sprite®. Finished beverage products bearing our trademarks, sold in the United States since 1886, are now sold in more than 200 countries.

The Coca-Cola System

We are a global business that operates locally in every community we proudly serve. We are able to create global reach with local resources because of the strength of the Coca-Cola system, which comprises our Company and our bottling partners—nearly 250 worldwide.

The Coca-Cola system is not a single entity from a legal or managerial perspective, and the Company does not own or control most of our bottling partners. Our Company sources ingredients; manufactures and sells concentrates, beverage bases and syrups to our bottling operations; owns the brands and is responsible for consumer brand marketing initiatives. Our bottling partners and some Company-owned operations manufacture, package, merchandise and distribute the finished branded beverages to our customers and vending partners, who then sell our beverages to consumers.

Our bottling partners work closely with customers—grocery stores, restaurants, street vendors, convenience stores, movie theaters, amusement parks and many others—to execute localized strategies developed in partnership with our Company. Through effective collaboration, we are able to sell our products to consumers at a rate of more than 1.9 billion servings a day.

Reconciliation of GAAP and Non-GAAP Financial Measures

The Company reports its financial results in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States (“GAAP” or referred to herein as “reported”). However, management believes that certain non-GAAP financial measures provide investors with additional meaningful financial information that should be considered when assessing our underlying business performance and trends. Management also uses these non-GAAP financial measures in making financial, operating, compensation and planning decisions and in evaluating the Company’s performance. Non-GAAP financial measures should be viewed in addition to, and not as an alternative for, the Company’s reported results prepared in accordance with GAAP. Our non-GAAP financial measures do not represent a comprehensive basis of accounting.

For additional details regarding the reconciliation of GAAP and non-GAAP financial measures below, see the Company’s Current Reports on Form 8-K filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) on February 16, 2018 and February 9, 2017. This information is also available in the “Investors” section of the Company’s website, www.coca-colacompany.com.
