About this course: Is your show accessible?
When we ask about accessibility to shows, most people think about access for wheel chairs: the sitting arrangements and where their WC is accessible.
When we ask for more details, people usually think about producing a show where persons with disabilities

Subtitles

Video subtitles

All Coursera videos have subtitles in the primary language of the course. Some course videos also have translated subtitles.

You can use the video settings to turn subtitles on or off.

You can also download video subtitles as an .srt file to use with a downloaded video, or as a transcript file to read.

Report errors in subtitles

If you find a serious mistake in the subtitles or translated subtitles for a Coursera video, you can report the error by clicking on the flag icon at the bottom of the video.

Translation

Video translations

To see translated subtitles for a video, turn subtitles on and choose the language you want to see subtitles in.

You can see what languages are available for a course by checking the course's description page. If a language is listed, that means at least 80% of the course's video subtitles have been translated. When you search for courses, you can filter your search to find courses that have translations in certain languages.

Not all videos have subtitles in all languages. Right now, Coursera doesn't support right-to-left languages.

Subtitle translations are done by Coursera's Global Translator Community. Although our GTC members work hard to create high quality translations, Coursera doesn't guarantee that all translations will be complete and accurate.

Help translate Coursera videos

You can help translate Coursera videos by joining the GTC.

We use a third-party platform called Transifex to organize translation projects. Before you can start translating Coursera materials, you'll need to create a Transifex account.

When you complete the GTC signup process on Coursera, make sure you:

- Enter your Transifex username correctly.
- Provide the email address associated with your Coursera account (not another email address you use).
