Objectives and Contextualisation

This module revolves around the analysis of reading habits in various contexts. It examines the factors that contribute to the formation of reading habits from a theoretical (through readings) and a practical (through case studies) perspective. Finally, it observes the role played by school and libraries in the promotion of reading habits and in the current policies on this same issue.

Skills

- Contextualise professional activity in the reading habits of today's society and in the processes of school-based learning.
- Continue the learning process, to a large extent autonomously.
- Design, plan and evaluate library, school and community reading projects that are appropriate to their context.
- Develop cooperation strategies for working in teams.
- Develop professional values that include ethical work practices.
- Develop strategies for innovation, creativity and entrepreneurship in the context of school libraries and reading promotion.
- Link up and promote reading and cultural activities, both internal and external, using the appropriate tools.
- Master the use of ICT and apply it to management and promotion processes in a library 2.0. context.
- Use acquired knowledge as a basis for originality in the application of ideas, often in a research context.

Learning outcomes

1. Analyse the context and the aims of interventions in relation to sociological and ethnographic theory frameworks for reading.
2. Continue the learning process, to a large extent autonomously.

3. Develop communication and inter-personal skills needed to manage projects involving the different members of the educational community.
4. Develop cooperation strategies for working in teams.
5. Exploit the different ways in which ICT can help to promote reading.
6. Implement reading promotion strategies using digital and non-digital tools.
7. Implement strategies to promote good reading habits, taking the different influencing factors into account.
8. Make innovative and creative proposals to promote reading.
9. Use acquired knowledge as a basis for originality in the application of ideas, often in a research context.

Content

- Sociological and ethnographic studies on reading habits: impact, results and implications.
- Factors and contexts likely to promote reading habits: families, society and schools. The development of one's reading identity in communities of literacy practice.
- The construction of reading habits at schools: reader profiles and teacher's modes of intervention.
- The role of libraries in the promotion of reading habits: impact of the collections presented and of the range of services offered.
- Policies for the promotion of reading habits: institutional reading plans, resources and support initiatives.
- Actions to promote reading habits in the libraries: formats and target audience.
- The impact of ICT in the forms of accessing written works and developing reading practices.

Methodology

The course combines theory and practice. Teacher-centred lessons and on-line tutorials will provide the background necessary to engage participants in the following activities:

- Analysis of print and digital materials.
- Elaboration and public presentation of the course assignments.
- Resolution of cases, exercises or problems related to the course contents using ICT tools.
- Participation in virtual forums to debate the contents of the course compulsory readings.

Activities
