Methodology

The methodology of the course is based on the Problem-Based Learning model. (PBL), cooperative learning and the case method.

The work sessions can be lectures, practical or mixed.

Lectures will be based on oral presentations by the teacher complemented with audiovisual teaching resources (PWP, videos, etc.), new technologies (ICT), as well as advice concerning bibliography.

Seminars will consist of monitoring real cases of crime and its preventive approach, where students will have to conclude with their proposals to intervene in these cases. Students will be provided with a guide to do these exercises.

During the seminars a variety of methods will be used: group dynamics, plenaries, and cooperative groups.

Individual work of the students will benefit from the use of the virtual campus.

Evaluation

1. Model of evaluation

The grading system is based on continuous assessment. Attendance is compulsory as it will allow students to be assessed with respect to the specific skills they acquire during the module. Participation in class, the capacity of students to link concepts to practice as well as the consideration to the ethical values of the profession will be rewarded.

2. Items of the evaluation

Assessment of the module will consist of three scores:

- Portfolio: 50%

-Final work of the course: 30%. The content of this work will be agreed between students and professor.

- PBA: 20%

To overcome the course must have successfully passed the three activities,

3. Assessment conditions

Active participation in all classes and group work, including the completion of individual and group assignments, is compulsory.

4. Requirement to pass

Students must obtain a minimum grade of 5 in each of the three evaluation activities that make up the assessment.

5. Resit

According to the evaluative methodology used, based on exhibitions and theoretical-practical contents, if a student does not pass one of the three activities will have the possibility of repeating it.

6. Other aspects to consider:

-If the student fails the module, he/she will have to re-register for the module in the next edition of the course. In that case, the entire module will have to be repeated from scratch.

-Throughout the evaluation process the student will be informed of his/her progress with respect to assignments that need to be submitted.

-In accordance with UAB regulations, individual or group plagiarism or copying of any work or written test will be penalized with a zero score ("0") which means students will not have the possibility of repeating the assignment or test in the future (in the case of group plagiarism each student of the group will receive a zero score ("0") for the assignment or test.

-Attendance at all sessions is compulsory. The student must attend at least 80% of all sessions; otherwise the assessment will correspond to "unsatisfactory".

-Students will be given the results of the correction of the evaluative evidence within a maximum period of 30 days.
