Objectives and Contextualisation

This is a subject of third year in the Anthropology degree and continues the process of learning of fundamental themes for students.

Its general purpose is to provide a panoramic knowledge of the authors, works and subjects most relevant developed in the ethnological study of the area of Spain, understood both as scenario and as ethnographic object. It also aims to develop a critical look at the different ways in which anthropology has been done in Spain and about Spain, its relationships and problems.

The subject is designed also to provide the necessary tools and skills for the training of students as future professionals of anthropology, especially in their application in the labor field and of research in Spain.
