Content

1. Sociology as discipline

The sociology in the social science framework and tool for the study of social change and intervention on the deviance, control and social groups.

2. Basic concepts of the sociology for the criminology

Sociability, socialization and deviance. Social roles and socialization agents. Culture, institutions and social norms. Origin of the social inequalities. Power and authority.

3. Great historical debates in sociology

The anomie from functionalism to the structuralism. Social sources of inequalities from the Illustration, Marxism and contemporary theories. Social control and power: Durkheim, Weber, Foucault. Social responsibility from Hannah Arendt to Nancy Fraser. The challenge of the globalization, from Manuel Castells to Saskia Sassen.

4. The sociological analysis related to current criminology issues

Migration, racism and criminalization. Terrorism, violence and pacifism. Is the crime a male question, while victimization is a female issue? The cybercrime, new types of crime in the internet and the social networks.

Methodology

Teaching will be mixed: lectures will be online and seminars face-to-face. The content course will be developed by professor among virtual lectures and discussions in the classroom. Seminars will address practical and theoretical contents, working on texts and audiovisuals resources, doing dynamics and presentations led by teacher. These classes involve individual and small group work. An investigation work related to some aspect of the agenda must be submitted. The discourse of the students will be positively evaluated as an evidence of their understanding and adequate utilisation of the scientific methodology.
