Prerequisites

No academic prerequisites.

The student must have the habit of reading, watching, listening and consulting different general information media, and especially following news of an international political nature, as well as opinion articles on global political issues understood in their broadest sense.

Important: This subject is basic and it is recommended to have it approved to take the subject "Contemporary International System" (SIC).

It is recommended to have read at least the book: Lundestad, Geir. (Various editions) East, West, North, South: major developments in international politics since 1945, London, Sage Publications Ltd.

Objectives and Contextualisation

This subject has a basic formation character. This means that it serves as a foundation from which to build the Degree in International Relations, the International Relations itinerary of the Degree in Political Science and Public Management, and the postgraduate degrees of the Faculty of Political Science and Sociology.

The basic objectives of the course are: for students to know the fundamental concepts of the discipline; to acquire analytical skills applicable to international relations; to become familiar with the set of processes and references that have shaped contemporary international society on a global scale; and to be able to express and defend their points of view, both orally and in writing, on the most relevant international issues.

Competences

Political Science and Public Management

- Applying theoretical and analytical knowledge of International Relations to practical and professional cases, in particular to the areas of conflict and cooperation between actors.
- Arguing from different theoretical perspectives.
- Assessing specific distinctive aspects and conceptual and methodological instruments of the different tendencies and analytical approximations of International Relations.
- Demonstrating good writing skills in different contexts.
- Demonstrating they know theoretical tendencies and classical and recent analytical approximations of International Relations.
- Designing data collection techniques, coordinating the information processing and meticulously applying hypothesis verification methods.
- Distinguishing the discipline's main theories and different fields: conceptual developments, theoretical frameworks and theoretical approaches underlying the discipline's knowledge and different areas and sub-areas, as well as their value for the professional practice through concrete cases.
- Identifying sources of data and conducting bibliographic and documentary searches.
- Interpreting and applying English texts in an academic way.
- Managing the available time in order to accomplish the established objectives and fulfil the intended task.
- Producing and planning researches or analytical reports.
- Realising effective oral presentations that are suited to the audience.
- Synthesizing and critically analysing information.
- Using the main information and documentation techniques (ICT) as an essential tool for the analysis.
- Working autonomously.
- Working in teams and networking, particularly in interdisciplinary conditions.

International Relations

- Analyse international society and its structure and understand its importance for real-life problems and professional practice.
- Identify data sources and carry out rigorous bibliographical and documentary searches.
- Identify the main theories of international relations and their different fields (international theory, conflicts and security, international politics, etc.) to apply them in professional practice.
- Learn and analyse the impacts of the globalisation process on domestic political systems and on the behaviour of the political actors and the public.
- Produce and prepare the presentation of intervention reports and/or proposals.
- Students must be capable of applying their knowledge to their work or vocation in a professional way and they should have building arguments and problem resolution skills within their area of study.
- Students must be capable of collecting and interpreting relevant data (usually within their area of study) in order to make statements that reflect social, scientific or ethical relevant issues.
- Students must develop the necessary learning skills to undertake further training with a high degree of autonomy.
- Students must have and understand knowledge of an area of study built on the basis of general secondary education, and while it relies on some advanced textbooks it also includes some aspects coming from the forefront of its field of study.

Economic interdependence and globalization

Global problems

Methodology

The student's dedication to this subject is divided into several types of activities, each with a specific weight of work hours. This variety of forms of work is materialized in differentiated methodologies.

This subject has 12 ECTS credits, that is, it implies a total dedication of 300 hours, distributed in:

- Directed activities are activities in the classroom, with the presence of the teacher and can consist of master classes (with the support of ICT and with the possibility of developing debates in large groups), in seminars for discussion of compulsory readings in smaller groups and in sessions more oriented towards practical issues, in which cases, problems and examples related to the course syllabus will be analyzed. For these sessions, there will be compulsory pre-readings announced by the teachers in advance. These activities represent approximately one third of the total work required.

- Supervised activities are activities carried out by the student outside the classroom in accordance with a work plan designed and subsequently tutored and evaluated by the teacher. The student must: read and prepare texts that will be subject to control and evaluation in seminar sessions; write two group papers, which will be subject to control and evaluation with seminars; gather documentation on a specific topic of international relations (from a guide prepared by the teachers), write a brief report and make a presentation in the classroom; Watch a film (from a relationship chosen by the teachers), analyze it, interpret its international context and present a written report. Also, during the course, the student should read short articles in relation to which he/she will have to comment on the text read and, in addition, actively participate in debates on the articles. Also included are tutorials and other similar course follow-up activities. These activities represent approximately 10% of the work required.

- Autonomous activities are all those activities that the student does on his own and according to the requirements of the subject to successfully pass the subject, can be basic and complementary readings, study of class notes or all those other activities that complement the training that is achieved in this course. These activities represent, approximately, half of the work time of the students. The teaching methodology is adapted to this distribution of work and activities.

Assessment

Evaluation

Partial controls: 50% of the grade

Each semester there will be five partial and liberating checks on the readings of the agenda. The checks and readings will be discussed later in class and used for teaching purposes. 50% of the grade of the semester will be the average of these controls. In order to pass the course, the average of these controls in each semester must be higher than 5.

Of the seminars of the subject, four can be evaluated (two in each term). Each of them is worth 12.5% of the final grade (50% overall). They are not recoverable.

The dates of the controls and seminars that can be evaluated with marks, and other activities, will be specified in the course programme (see Virtual Campus).

Those who have not passed the controls will have the opportunity to take part in the compensation activities (recoveries) on the day determined by the Faculty. The compensation activities will be carried out after each semester and after the second semester's academic period has ended.

Those who have passed the average of the controls for a semester may apply for the compensatory activity in order to raise the grade of one control for each corresponding semester (January, June and the two semesters in the final recovery) without the risk of lowering the grade.

Seminars that can be evaluated with a grade cannot be retaken.

In accordance with article 117.2 of the UAB Academic Regulations, the evaluation of those students who have been enrolled before may consist of a single synthesis examination. The students who wish to be evaluated this way should contact the professor at the beginning of the semester.

Bibliography

Compulsory readings

- Barbé, Esther, Relaciones Internacionales, Madrid, Tecnos, 2020 (4ª ed.).

- LUNDESTAD, Geir. (Various editions) East, West, North, South: mayor developments in international politics since 1945, London, Sage Publications Ltd.

-Other readings and a book in the second semester that the teachers consider appropriate for the follow-up of the subject and that we will discuss in class. These readings can be on paper (which can be purchased at the Reprographic Service of the Faculty) or "virtual" (hung in electronic format on the Virtual Campus). In this sense, students are informed that part of the readings to be made (either to follow up the theory or to carry out the seminars) will be in English.
