Objectives and Contextualisation

It is a subject of the first year, first semester, therefore, of basic training. Its contextualization takes place from the origin and development of the legal regulation of the main labor institutions such as: the employment contract, freedom of association, collective bargaining and collective conflicts. Also within the framework of the birth and development of trade unions and business associations and the initial training of the collective bargaining system.

The subject provides the theoretical knowledge related to the construction of the political, legal and social system of contemporary Spain, to understand our current system. Within this framework, students are able to understand critically the historical trajectory of legislation and labor institutions. It is also about linking the past social right to the present and understanding the legal concepts as well as their historical evolution.

The subject by its own nature incorporates the gender perspective, to understand the androcentric legal model that is built with the first social norms. The presence of working women, their contribution to the family economy and how they are subject to regulation by the legislator is something present throughout the whole agenda.

The objectives of the subject, therefore, are:

- 1) Have theoretical knowledge of the career of labor law and understand the analysis of historical facts.
- 2) Know the past realities as critical research methods
- 3) Understand the legal concepts of each historical period analyzed as well as the institutions created within the framework of each of the stages under study.

- 4) Demonstrate the acquisition of theoretical knowledge through written and oral reflection.
- 5) Evaluate the gender perspective in the beginning of the labor legislation and in the consolidation of the labor law institutions.

Competences

Methodology

The teaching of the subject will be mixed: the master classes will be virtual and the classroom seminars / practices will be face-to-face. Also, teaching methodology and evaluation may experience some modification depending on the restrictions imposed by the health authorities.

The development of the teaching of the subject and the training of students is based on the following activities:

(I) Directed: those that are carried out in theory classes (40.5 hours).

Teachers will make an analytical explanation of each of the study topics. Through the master lesson it is intended to transmit the basic knowledge of the Program, stimulate interest in historical analysis, and give answer to the doubts of the students in a collective way.

The students, in smaller groups, analyze and solve together with the professor historical-legal texts. In general, comments will be made in class, although their preparation can be done in writing before the class. The basis of the practical work is the understanding and critical application of historical regulations related to the essential content explained in the theoretical classes.

Its objective is to promote the acquisition of different transversal competences by students. To class will work different aspects of the Program from an empirical point of view, through the use of legal texts, that each student will have previously worked with the readings or materials indicated. It will work and will improve reading comprehension, critical information research, writing, individual and team work.

(II) Supervised: obligatory tutoring for the students (4.5 hours).

(III) Autonomous: external work of students (100 hours).

Individual work of the students based on readings and the search for information.

The directed work is complemented by individual and group work. The objective of this activity is to promote independence of the student in the learning process and provide analytical tools that encourage your critical capacity

Tutorials The learning process will be supervised by the teachers through tutorials. the teachers will be at your disposal in the hours previously established for it, to answer questions and follow the general evolution of the course.

Virtual Campus or Moodle Classroom of the subject

In classroom teaching, the Virtual Campus is a useful tool that allows students to have access to a complementary space through which they can access different teaching materials that the teacher considers important to deepen the contents of the subject.

The set of activities will be specified in each group in the classroom moodle, activated the first week of the course. In this space, the schedule of both evaluable and non-assessable activities will be specified in a precise manner. The fixed dates are irremovable, without prejudice to the fact that exceptionally and for reasons of force majeure can be modified, with sufficient notice.

(IV) Evaluation: 5 hours.

Assessment

1. The continuous assessment system combines the attendance to the theoretical classes, the participation in the practical classes, the realization of the evaluable activities and the passing of the final exam. It is an essential requirement to pass the final test with a 5 so that it becomes average with the rest of evaluable activities.

- 1 written test (final exam) of 10 questions with a value of 50% of the total grade.
- evaluable activities with a value of 50% of the total rating. Practices will be carried out mainly in the classroom, and will consist of a text commentary (10% of the grade) and two knowledge assessment tests (20% each).

2. Conditions to be evaluated

Students can only be evaluated if they attend a minimum of 80% of the classes, perform a minimum of 80% of the individual work, group work and the test / s.

3. Requirements to pass the subject and re-evaluation.

Students must obtain a minimum grade of 5 in all four items of the assessment. If a student does not pass the evaluation for the individual, work group or the final test will be able to recover the day set for re-evaluation. Individual work and group work are recovered through one or more theoretical questions about the contents and subjects worked on in the respective activities.

To pass the subject through re-evaluation it is also necessary that students obtain a minimum grade of 5 in all the items. If this minimum grade is not obtained for each item, even if the arithmetic mean of the four assessment items exceeds 5, the final grade in the report will be failed with a grade of 4.5.

Given that this is a second chance, the maximum grade for tests and work recovered is 5.
