Prerequisites

A fluid understanding of International Contemporary History. This means knowing main dates and major evolutionary features in the social, economic and political fields. A minimum knowledge of English, necessary for reading academic texts

Objectives and Contextualisation

This subject studies the History of international relations in the period that follows the end of the Cold War (1948-1990). It is, therefore, an exercise of what is called current History or History of present time. The programme covers the years between 1991 and 2016 because can be identified there a closed period which includes: a) The beginning and end of the so-called New World Order led by the United States as the dominant superpower after the Cold War; b) The Great Recession; c) The reaction against globalization with the emergence of radical nationalisms and populist leaders. All this is accompanied by important transformations in the praxis of international relations.

Complementing these contents, the subject provides a study of the period 1979-1989, which lays the foundations for the end of the Cold War and subsequent transformations, as well as terminology and specific concepts of international relations, a study of the evolution of the military science, diplomacy (conflicts and resolution or prevention of them), security and intelligence, and the theory of the state that are common in Political Science and Law but are not usually adapted to the studies in History.

Assessment

Standard regulations for a course without confinement incidents and / or teleteaching

As it was established by the Degree Report, approved and in force, the subject will be evaluated regarding the following points:

- a) Written tests (both partial and final), with cumulative marks that means up to 70% of the total maximum score that will be obtained;
- b) Works, reviews, summaries, comments on the analysis of texts and other documents (statistical tables, graphs, maps, images, etc.) and / or preparation of oral comments and interventions in the seminar, with an accumulated score of up to twenty% of the highest rating;
- c) Exhibitions and oral or written comments in the discussion sessions and debate seminars, with an accumulated rating that means up to 10% of the maximum rating;

In general terms, in order to pass the subject, the student must obtain a score of 5 out of 10. On the other hand, each professor can set, if he / she thinks it is useful, a minimum that must be achieved in each of the elements a), b) and c) here contemplated.

This translates into:

Two or three written exams (70%) spaced throughout the course.

A written work (20%).

Apprenticeships (10%)

The student will take a final reevaluation exam, on the date established by the Deanery, destined to reevaluate the students who failed the exams made during the course. Therefore, students must have been present in all the tests that appear in the teaching guide for the current year subject. And must have passed the minimum number of tests (exams) stipulated by the professor (2)

Warnings:

Only the evaluation activities carried out will be reevaluated and will be held on the official dates established by the Deanery. In no case, may the reevaluation be considered as a means of improving the qualification of students who had already passed the subject in the normal process of continuous evaluation. The maximum grade that can be obtained in the re-evaluation is 5.0 (Approved)

The plagiarism of written sources (internet, books, works, etc.) or copy in the exam, supposes the annulment of the exercise. In this subject plagiarism control scanner is used

The students will have the right to review the results of the tests carried out. The professor will establish opportunely the mechanisms to do it.

No special individual exam will be applied or negotiated, regardless of the dates established for the common students. Any imponderable that can affect any specific student, with duly documented justification, will be resolved within the framework of the dates and calls set for all
