Prerequisites

There are no prerequisites to take this course, although students must have assimilated the content of Language I: Modern Japanese in order to complete it successfully. Some of the materials used in this course are only available in English, so a good knowledge of this language will be useful.

Objectives and Contextualisation

The function of this subject is to further students' knowledge of the most basic and essential aspects of the phonetic, morphological, lexical, syntactic, semantic and pragmatic structure of the Japanese language and to continue developing the four basic communication skills. It is essential to assimilate the subject's content to be able to continue learning Japanese in the subsequent academic years. Throughout the semester, special attention will be paid to uses of language that are linked to the gender of speakers.

Competences

- East Asian Studies
- Apply knowledge of East Asian culture in order to be able to communicate.

Content

- Furthering knowledge and understanding of the phonetic, morphological, lexical and semantic structure of Japanese. Introduction of pragmatic and situational aspects of the language.
- Interacting orally in different everyday situations (asking where something is or how to get to a place, making offers or proposals, etc.).
- Expressing, in a very basic way, what one wishes, what one wants or does not want to do, one's own tastes, obligations, etc.
- Learning new kanji, bringing the total up to about 200.
- Reading short, simple didactic texts related to the semantic fields and everyday situations studied, and extracting specific information from some more complex texts.
- Writing short texts explaining or describing specific things (a room, a landscape, etc.) or narrating real or fictitious events (a trip, a social gathering, etc.).

Methodology

The students' work will revolve around the two textbooks Minna no Nihongo I and Basic Kanji Book I (see Bibliography), and the main emphasis will be on the introduction and explanation of content and the development of communication skills. Tasks that can be performed individually and require more time will be carried out as supervised activities.

Students are expected to not only acquire a mechanical command of Japanese but also to be able to use what they learn to communicate effectively. It is hoped that they will develop a positive attitude towards communication, taking full advantage of their knowledge to express themselves and to try to understand oral and written texts in Japanese.

Annotation: Within the schedule set by the centre or degree programme, 15 minutes of one class will be reserved for students to evaluate their lecturers and their courses or modules through questionnaires.

Assessment

Assessment is continuous. Students must provide evidence of their progress by completing tasks and tests. Task deadlines will be indicated in the course schedule on the first day of class.

Related matters

All information on assessment, assessment activities and their weighting is merely a guide. The subject's lecturer will provide full information when teaching begins.

Review

When publishing final marks prior to recording them on students' transcripts, the lecturer will provide written notification of a date and time for reviewing assessment activities. Students must arrange reviews in agreement with the lecturer.
