Methodology

(Traducció pendent de revisió lingüística)

In directed activities, the principles underpinning the methodology are:

- Classes will be carried out on an eminently practical level. From practice and reflective process, we will extract the theory of music education.

- The basic procedures on which the activities in classroom will be developed will be: listening, expression, interpretation, comprehension and musical creation. Group work and individual work will alternate.

- Teachers will show how to apply the contents of the program. All examples will be contextualized to the school reality.

- Carry out group and small group music analysis activities

- Small individual didactic proposals.

The classes are face-to-face and require the active participation of the students in debates, in the elaboration of reflections around various topics, and in the realization of practical activities and simulations of teaching situations.

-learning music.

The teacher interventions will consist, to a large extent, in leading the students' reflections of the analysis of practical questions to create criteria and fundamental pedagogical bases in musical education.

Some group work will be started or developed during class sessions, under the supervision of the teacher.

The autonomous work will start from the work done in class and support materials to analyze, and will mainly consist of:

- Design of activities for learning music of specific elements

- Search for materials and resources to develop didactic proposals.

Supervised activities are individual tutoring and tutored group activities.

Annotation: Within the schedule set by the centre or degree programme, 15 minutes of one class will be reserved for students to evaluate their lecturers and their courses or modules through questionnaires.

Only those tasks that the students fail can be re-evaluated and can only aspire to be passed with a 5. The degree of participation and the level of reflection of the contributions will be valued in the debates.

Attitude and active participation during the teaching and learning process are fundamental.

To pass this course, the student must show, in the activities proposed, a good general communicative competence, both orally and writing, and a good command of the language or languages that appear in the teaching guide.

Software

No specific software is required. However, it will be useful to have a score editor (eg: Sibelius, Finale, ...) and an audio editor (eg: audacity, garage band, wave pad, logic pro, cubase ...).
