The subject is considered as the possibility of entering into relationships with entities and institutions that carry out activities of a diverse nature, format and content, in order to know the professional practice of anthropology and to discover their possibilities in different fields and orientations.

The students must understand the meaning of the actions of both the entity and the people with whom they work and the people with whom they intervene; they will have to deal with the incidents, the effects, the impacts, the resistance, the confluences, the adjustments and the synergies of the processes in which they will participate; they will have to develop a formal knowledge of both the entity and other professional groups that are located and must be receptive and predisposed to the recognition of the different voices, criteria and interests of the groups involved in the project or program where they are inserted

Each year expands the offer of entities and places. A complete list of entities taking part on External Internship will be announced in November.

The course offers the possibility of incorporating in its own knowledge, based on an experience in the field with all its implications, what throughout the previous training has been learned. It is therefore an open agenda because each student will experience external practices in different entities and projects, and the contents focus on consolidating what has been learned previously and incorporating the new learning that comes out of the collaboration, participation and involvement in sociocultural projects.

Methodology

Students, regardless of what they have recorded in the pre-enrolment application, will request, within the term established by the coordination of Practices - which will be announced in advance, but is usually the month of November -, their preferences of entities and projects to carry out the practices, among the set of proposals that the Department has programmed for the course, prior agreement with the entities involved.

A process will be established for the allocation of placements to students by the teaching team of the Degree's Teaching Committee. Once accepted by the student the commitment to make them, there will be a Single Agreement with each student, which will show the hours of dedication, duration and tasks or the project in which they will collaborate and will participate, taking into account that the total hours of internships at the institution is 130h. These hours are supervised by the entity and linked to the specific project in which the practice is included and include an initial time for familiarization with the entity and the people that work there as well as for the design of the project, interviews, critical reflections and contributions to the group and the entity. The other 20h. will be used to carry out reports. The specific dedication will be established in the Convention.

Each institution will have a tutor -or two- in charge of each student's follow-up and, jointly, a proposal for a stay will be formulated that will be specified in the Individual Training Project of each student, which includes the Convention.

Therefore the student will have to make a project for his stay of practices, will have to carry out the stay of practices under the guidance of the tutors, one of the University and the other - or others- of the Entity that welcomes it in practice; It will have to adapt to the specific proposals of the agreement that will regulate the stay, will have to carry out the tasks that correspond to him and they will be assigned to him and will have to solve the evaluation of the subject by means of the elaboration of an intermediate report of the final report.

The quality assurance system associated with the period of external internships is fundamentally related to the appropriate and previous training in student anthropology, in the well-chosen choice of the promoter entity and the project to be solved, in the fluid relationship Among tutors, in the follow-up throughout the process of the tutors and, to the extent possible, of the intellectual, ethical, or even personal, support to the student.

Annotation: Within the schedule set by the centre or degree programme, 15 minutes of one class will be reserved for students to evaluate their lecturers and their courses or modules through questionnaires.
