Prerequisites

No specific requirements are required to take this course.

Objectives and Contextualisation

The aim is to offer the student a set of methodological and dogmatic tools that will enable him/her to develop an orderly and systematic method of investigating legal norms and their application to reality.

In order to enable the student to progress in his or her training through a possible doctoral programme, specific techniques and resources will be examined in order to research and produce innovative results in the field of legal-labour relations and social protection.

The achievement of these objectives will be developed fundamentally through the commentary of basic readings relating to the field of labour and social security law as well as the study and analysis of case law.

Methodology

The student learning process in this module is structured around the three types of training activities specified below:

1) Directed activities

These are those that take place in the classroom, at the times foreseen for the module and under the direction of the teacher in charge. There are two types of directed activities:

- a) the master classes, in which the teacher will present and develop different aspects of the agenda;
- b) the seminars, in which the teacher and the students will carry out the debate and analysis of a reading previously prepared by the students. These seminars may take the form of a preliminary presentation prepared by the students and their subsequent discussion in the classroom.

2) Autonomous activities

They are all those in which the students organize their time and effort in an autonomous way. In the development of this module these activities will be developed individually and will consist of: the reading of bibliography, the elaboration of schemes and summaries, the elaboration of a project or report.

Annotation: Within the schedule set by the centre or degree programme, 15 minutes of one class will be reserved for students to evaluate their lecturers and their courses or modules through questionnaires.

Activities

Title	Hours	ECTS	Learning Outcomes
Type: Directed
Master classes	20	0.8	10, 14, 11, 18
Presentations	60	2.4	1, 5, 13, 8
Seminars	40	1.6	10, 12, 13, 14, 7, 11, 18
Type: Autonomous

Assessment

The particularities of this subject make it advisable that the evaluation is developed based on the work developed by the student in the form of results in which his work as a researcher is projected. Thus, dispensing with evaluation by examination, the qualification will be obtained essentially from the work that the student develops in the seminars:

Attendance at master classes and conferences: attendance will be worth 30% of the final mark, always bearing in mind that attendance will be required for no less than 80% of the sessions.

Participation in the seminars: Attendance and participation in these will be worth 70% of the final mark. This mark will be obtained through the qualification of the activities proposed by the teaching staff in the form of the resolution of questionnaires, papers or summary works and the participation that the student has in the debates.

Students who have been authorised to use the single assessment system must complete an independent work activity for each of the three modules that make up the syllabus and complete a final verification activity. The three independent work activities, the content of which will be determined at the beginning of the course and which will correspond to two different typologies (review, case study...) must be handed in on the day on which the verification activity is carried out. The overall value of the three activities will be 60% (none individually more than 40%), the remaining 40% corresponding to the verification activity.
