Prerequisites

There are no prerequisites for this course.

Objectives and Contextualisation

This subject offers significant knowledge related to the following goals:

- To understand the psychosocial factors (personal and interactional, historical and cultural) that intervene in the configuration of gender identity, gender expression and sexual orientation.
- To understand how power relations influence the intersectional constitution of dominant social categories.
- To analyse the processes of subjection and subjectivisation involved in the intersectional construction of identities.
- To analyse the processes of performative constitution of identities in concrete interaction contexts.
- To develop a critical perspective towards the effects of oppression of the normative sex-gender system.

Learning Outcomes

1. CM03 (Competence) Put teamwork skills into practice: a commitment to the team, regular collaboration, encouraging problem solving.
2. KM06 (Knowledge) Understand the foundations of the social and psychological sciences in order to analyse the relationship between the history of gender relations, the significance of sexual differences and how inequalities are generated, as well as the psychosocial impact they have in the contemporary context of globalisation.
3. KM07 (Knowledge) Identify the intersection of different areas of inequality, such as class, race, sexuality, gender expression, age or disability in order to analyse psychosocial problems related to gender in globalised societies.
4. KM08 (Knowledge) Integrate the psychosocial scientific knowledge acquired when studying gender-related issues in androcentric and binary societies.
5. KM74 (Knowledge) Recognise the resources necessary for the relationship between care programmes for people in a situation of dependency and equality and equity plans in institutions, companies, and public, private and non-governmental organisations.
6. SM03 (Skill) Search for examples of psychosocial processes related to gender identity in everyday life found in the main discursive phenomena, and document them.
7. SM04 (Skill) Apply knowledge on psychosocial and cultural variability and its genesis in order to avoid gender inequalities and projections in the field of health.

Content

The following contents will be worked on in the course:

- Psychosocial construction of individual and collective identities.
- Psychosocial construction of identity throughout the life cycle.
- Analysis of the construction of identities in intersectional spaces of coexistence.
- Power relations and social categorization.
- Gender diversity and sex-affective diversity.
- Subjection and subjectivization processes.
- Processes of differentiation, normativity and gender-related discrimination.
- Gender performativity and queer perspective.
- Intersectional perspective and analysis of identity construction.
- Agencies, resistance and social transformation.

Assessment

The assessment for the course "Psychosocial Construction of Identities and Diversity" is structured around five learning outcomes (Ev1-Ev5).

Ev1: Final Exam (30% of the grade): This is an individual assessment consisting of 45 multiple-choice questions, and students have 35 minutes to complete the exam. This component primarily assesses knowledge and understanding of the fundamental concepts, theories, and research covered throughout the course.

Ev2a and Ev2b: Group Work (20% each, for a total of 40% of the grade): These two learning outcomes require students to work in groups to produce a collaborative project, which is submitted in written form.

Ev3: Oral Presentation (20%): This assessment is based on group work to be presented to the entire class. The series "Autodefensa" is analysed to examine how gender identities and diversity are represented and constructed in current popular culture, applying the concepts covered in the course.

Ev4: Online Exercises (10% of the grade): During the course, a series of online exercises will be conducted that will involve participation and the application of concepts.

- To pass, the student must obtain a weighted average of the assessment activities equal to or greater than 5. To be included in the average, EV1 score (Exam) must have a value equal or greater than 4 (on a scale of 0 to 10).
- A course grade will not be earned if less than two Ev2 (assignments) are submitted.

- The student can recuperate failed assignments if it obtains a final mark between 3 and 5. The recuperation will have a similar format, and the maximum total score of the assignment will be 5.
- Evidences with plagiarism will have a null grade and the grade coordinator will be informed so to take appropriate action.

In the event of a student committing any irregularity that may lead to a significant variation in the grade awarded to an assessment activity, the student will be given a zero grade for this activity; regardless of any disciplinary process that may take place. In the event of several irregularities in assessment activities, the student will receive a zero as the final grade for the class.

Single assessment

- To opt for Single Assessment, you must apply using the corresponding form following the official calendar.
- The assessment activities will be the same as in the continuous assessment, and group work will be carried out among people taking the single assessment.

Use of Artificial Intelligence

The "Psychosocial Construction of Identities and Diversity" course allows the use of AI as part of your learning process in the preparation of your assignments. AI is a technology that is already redefining many areas of our society, including the professional and academic spheres, and, as professionals, you must learn to interact with these technologies effectively and ethically. The university setting is a good place to become familiar with AI, explore its capabilities, and understand its limitations. The goal is not for AI to replace your critical thinking or reflection, but rather for it to become a tool that enhances your analytical capacity. It is crucial that the use of AI be transparent and accountable, identifying the specific tools you have used and including a critical reflection on how AI has influenced your process and the outcome of the activity. Your personal contribution to the analysis and reflection must be significant.
