

Course Presentation

Coordinator: Sofia Fonseca, Teiduma, Consultancy on Heritage and Culture

This course was funded by the German Foreign Office and developed by the German Archaeological Institute (DAI), in collaboration with the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona (UAB), the Interdisciplinary Center for Archaeology and Evolution of Human Behavior (ICArEHB) in Portugal, and the Eduardo Mondlane University in Mozambique, with input from experts around the world.

Africa has a rich cultural heritage spanning tens of thousands of years, including the earliest known fossils of our hominin ancestors, abundant and diverse rock art sites, and some of the oldest civilizations in human history.

Would you like to know more about the new methods archaeologists are using to study African archaeology?

And to learn directly from case studies with researchers working on the continent?

Are you interested in knowing the role local communities have in the preservation and protection of heritage sites?

By enrolling in this course, you will have the opportunity to learn and explore these and so many other subjects in African Archaeology and Heritage and discover the rich and diverse heritage of Africa.

Learning objectives:

1. Understand the course objectives, structure, and expectations.
2. Comprehend the main topics and themes covered throughout the course.
3. Reflect on personal learning goals and interests related to the course.
4. Develop a plan for how to achieve the established learning goal.
