I am an old man with barely a tooth and receding gums.
I would make a poor meal.

ah, it is true, he said sadly,
without teeth the tendons are tough.
I would much rather have a tender child,
with his teeth still in the gum.

then you will not eat me? I quavered.

oh but I must, said the dragon;
after all,
a tooth in the mouth is worth two in the gum.

then I awoke,
crossing the bridge to reality.

-- Victor Lazarow

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

SIX YEARS OF AGE

My father is the King
Of Silence. He floats on a throne
Of smoke, pale blue messages, like Serpents, issue from Between his closed lips.

The room is tall, with A single huge table placed directly At its center. From the Floor to the ceiling, each wall is Panelled with darkest oak.

In the room adjoining, my Mother and sister, the Queen and Princess, languidly perform their Evening ablutions. There Are no slaves in the house.

From a large box in one Corner, bombastic and melodious by Turns, music and voices alternately Foam and chuckle. My father Lifts his eye in amusement.
At the table in the center
Of the room, alone save for the small Utensils of my art, I sit
In easy concentration, making designs
With colored sand on paper.

Soon the clock on the mantle
Will strike an indeterminate number
In an endless sequence of notes,
And I shall rise from my chair.
Many kisses shall proceed me to bed.

How THE FOOTBALL Was BORN

An elephant in swimming trunks
Was flying through the dark Carrying the Earth on his back.

When he got to the edge of the Ocean, he stopped, leaned over
And yelled down to the Chinese Gatekeeper who thrives inside
The boiling core of Everybody's Mind. "Hey, give me a hand with This tomato, will you?" And the Chinaman, himself not unfamiliar With childhood, and believing all The while it was a balloon, blew
It up to its present size, the Shape of which resembles his eyes.

-- Ken Dobel
Santa Rosa, California

the ladies still don't care

the whole thing is over, bastards, I've been banging the walls for 3 days and 4 nights chained in the corner of the room in my own hardened jism.
I can't get out to pay the rent or buy a paper.
somebody drunk upstairs has been playing the