LOOKING AT THE UNICORN TAPESTRIES

this one's for anne's
marriage to louis
full of fruits and
collars stags a
hyena rabbits a
unicorn's horn in
a stream to suck
up poison, nothing
as simple as it seems

2
here some pieces of
cloth are missing
but we know anne by her rings. (was the
rug eaten by animals
spread over corn to
keep it from freezing)
does anne compare her
rings her sleeves,
22 and buying black
velvet to wear when charles dies. is she already thinking of
louis fingers on the skin where the blue
and gold cloth stops

3
the notes say how we
know his long fingers.
but no one is sure what
the squirrel means

4
in the fourth
the flags are a new color.
anne looks older suddenly as if she'd prefer fewer people but couldn't change that. louis gold and yellow in the background. the people seem too huge
for the castle
the marriage contract
sealed the unicorn
captured in chains. (does Anne dream the years
in front of these threads,
the beast tied to the
pomegranate tree, the
the ripening fruit in
the tree of her body

PULLING THE TOWER OF BABEL OUT OF DUST

out of the plains of
old Mesopotamia
in the ruins of Babylon deep under a field of
water men are
reading wedge
shaped writing

the Euphrates in the distance sheep and
goats grazing in the ruins of the palace
ringing of sheep bells

Hammurabi and Nebuchadnezzar made love and died here Alexander the Great
caught malaria
and couldn't leave

the bricks were lugged away salt ate the stones
the hanging gardens
deep under the earth
now these rows of bulls
mythical beasts scaly
forked unicorns
with eagle claws

standing out in relief
from the flaking brickwork their glazed colors
long since worn away
