

what type of marking substance had etched them there, and what sort of night had happened anyhow.

If anyone had told them of the correct gentleman in the impeccable suit, who had walked up and down the length of those neatly fitted segments of granite, folded tightly in upon himself with the severity of a furred umbrella, and who had tapped out his impatience with the tips of his fingers on the rock, as if the gray of it had merely clouded the keyboards of several petrified typewriters, they would have paid no attention at all, but if they had heard the slightest suggestion of fingertips, left there by the secret agent, they would have had those blocks rooted up, hoisted, crated and trucked off somewhere for insatiable testing and, as like as not, would have lost a whole police force in a manhunt for the secret agent, whose only crime had been the temporary dislocation of an aspect of cultural faith.

They were not told. The timely intervention of a sparrow easily distracted them. The infuriating spots soon vanished.

A Covering Letter

Dear Editors,

I am sending you five rocks. They are overstatements of weight; too solid to stare into immediate dust; too quick with pyrite and quartz to be tedious, yet sufficiently conglomerate to confuse you, if you are normal; too much given to erratic winking to leave you in peace. Infusible, insoluble, and entirely untractable, but just vivid enough to make a vague blur out of anything you choose to set beside them.

If you reject them, you will be ridding yourselves of the five best items for keeping other people's poems from blowing away, of the five items best suited for throwing through the windows of the Ford Foundation, and if you keep them, you had better not forget to make them available for public inspection, because, if left unused, they rot, and in so doing, they are radioactive.

-- Barbara A. Holland

New York NY

olga korbut

always having been fascinated with gymnastics and mans' ability to twist himself into tangles I flicked on the television in an hour of poetic godless despair and the womens' team championships were under way the Americans trailing the Russians

I watched with a three year old amazement as the girls vaulted into the still air danced on the huge square mats and tip-toed along the balancing beam they all had rhythm concentration and guts and were polished under the gun Hemingway and Goya would have smiled then I saw the baby Russian girl prance up I can still see her image pausing on the top unparallel bar, waiting for balance to leap backwards head-over-heels into the boundless air backwards with grace of a porpoise threading a hoop she flew ...

I am still cheering

If you missed olga korbut that night as she caught the bar with chalky hands you missed one of the rare reflections of God.