VISITING PIONEER VILLAGE 4-5-'87

The indian mortar rock outside the museum tells me all I need to know but I buy a ticket anyway go through a turnstile and enter the village

A path beckons me left I follow the scent of flowers to the next corner

where a crabapple tree explodes in pink before my eyes

here
light encompasses everything the sky of unremembered blue forgot adorned with a fairytale cloud that may part and disclose angels in stetsons