we will be here for, i don't know how long, but while we are this old house will breathe; it will understand our love the wood and plaster will sing with us as we make love late into the night so it is okay that our progress (on the walls) seems slow; we are really moving at just the right speed.

WAITING ON THE GODDAMN BUS

sitting on the bench, waiting on the bus when this old man sits down next to me, turns his head to the side, spits and before i can lose myself in the paper he starts

"they'll fuck you everytime"

i'm just sitting, hoping for the bus, watching

"those cocksuckers — they'll fuck you everytime"

i sigh and resign myself

later we've compared scars and he has told me the portion of his eighty-six years that he considers important when he gets off the bus i miss him.
